HONGKONG, TURBOAY, MAR. 16, 1880, In refusing to ratify the Livadia Treaty it may be argued by the Government of Peking with some show of reason that they are but following the lead of the English Government, for to a Chinaman the manner in which the Chinese signature of the new famous Convention was obtained at Chefoo on Sept. 18th. 1876, and the subsequent treatment of that document, must convey peculiar notions of English consistency. Apart from the pronounced jealousies which The usual hours will be observed in closing | Sir Thomas Wade's Agreement raised in the diplomatic body at Peking, the Chefoo Convention and its neglect doubtless had much to do with the almost total failure of the recent Conference of Foreign Minister, at the Chinese capital, But Sir Thomas was not censured, far less degraded, for the part he took in the forcible action of 1876, liere, then, comes in the marked peculiarities of the Chinese case against the avowed author of the Treaty of Livadia. It is perfectly well known that the recent proceedings against Chung How at Peking have been so mixed up with the mysterious mock forms of native etiquette, that they ware not what they seem ;" but no one appears to be able to lift the veil and tell us how far they are a mockery as applied to the degraded and seemingly ruined ex ambassador, and how far they are real. A report is now current that Chung How has at last been sentenced to death, but that, like everything elecconnected with this strange business, need not be taken to mean anything beyond the fact that his action in Russia him been most emphatically condemned. As we have said in a previous article. however, there can be no doubt about this -that China has resolved to make a telling demonstration against Russia. and perhaps against the interference of Foreign Powers generally With the advantages sheet now possesses of Foreign advice, and the perfect information she now has at the company of the relations of Western Governments? to each other and towards Asiatic powers. she can now select her time for such demonstration far better than she could in former days. And it must not be forgotten that Ching is beginning to feel her increased strength. ### REVIEW.

don: Macmillan & Co., 1880. Though a short time, fourteen mouths would doubtless suffice to gain a fair knowledge of Canton, specially with the introductions to much of its inner. Chiness life, to which owing to her husband's position for some twenty years, Mrs Gray had free and frequent access. The letters to her mother, now just published, give many details of an interesting character in a chatty style, and will we doubt not, be read with pleasure and perhaps profit by those of her own sex especially, to whom the superficialities lady-life abroad, has many attractions from their novelty and quaint parade, and from which the sterner sex are generally excluded. Of course, there is no pretence in this volume to dive deep into the reasons of things or seek the secret springs of what to-day meet the eye in the Chinese family circle: while this is left for deeper thinkers and more recondite research, Mrs Gray generally gives A rug-or-was was pulled off on the Cricket the connecting links of the present with the past in the common folklore of the strangers amid whom for a time she was called to sojourn.

festivals or shows, would, we are inclined to think, have sufficed equally well as a dozen." In writing weekly to an anxious mother at home every little item helped to fill the sheet and please the parent. but it is not so with the public when they are admitted behind the scenes and who weary on needless repetitions. It is indeed no easy task for any one to put new life into repeated descriptions of dinner parties, pagoda, mosques, and temples, in which the one feature sought after and prized is their consistent likeness. Yet where the representations are varied, The two teams were more nearly matched, or the god in question has a special relationship, the volume before us gives in general an interesting and faithful, some-

In the style of the writing we cannot their mother tongue, in the intensitive "so" and "such," which without its correlative appears in all parts of the This is not an example to be fellowed, for namby-pamby English in print is always offensive, whether in "Our Journal in the Highlands" or "Fourteen Months in Canton." Mrs Gray also talks of cutting a thing "in half," a solecism in language and an impossibility in physics. To cut a thing into halves is often easy enough, but "in half." however easy in a lady's "lingo," would puzzle the wisest of phialso two great wants, the one a "Table of Contents," the second an "Index." The omission of the latter is a fault, of the former an offence. On the whole. however, we think this little volume a suitable companion of the Archdeacon's residing in the Colony :larger work. As the slipper boat to his junk, or the gig to his sloop, it may well follow in the wake of the latter, and carry what may be deemed some deficiencies of the larger craft.

Match 15th Fig. lt's not often that I do go to Church, but I did go las' night and I grined an experience that informs me and ecables me to advise my friends that for strue and miraculous apecimen of bad teste we should commend ourselves to the Rev. Mr. Groves. I certainly never heard anything like it. There is a passage in that much abased book "Tom Jones" which gives what I have always been acquatomed to consider about the lowest idea of the lowest kind of "Love" that could be formed, but the meaning attached to the word there is a high, holy and pursone compared with the in erpretation that Mr

Groves puts on it before a congregation in which our wives and als ers form a prominent part. If he is going to go on as he has begun, allow me to suggest that a large board be stuck up outside, like we have at Kahn's Museum and such like places,-For men only."

March loth. Sin,-When you quote an article from the North China Daily News or any other paper is it your custom to acknowledge it at the time or to make a violent effort to palm there is a likelihood of your being exposed for plagiarism, that the work is somebody else's and not your own? A plain answer to this plain question would be interesting to many people in view of what took place last night at the Oathedral. When a man on the same day reads two printed sermons and acknowledges one only, there is something enspicious and unhappy in the fact of his not acknowledging the other, and when he comes forward next Sunday and reluctantly tells us that he thinks it is hardly fair that the work of another should be appropriated wholesale without a word of soknowagree that that is so. The moral of the whole story is that even in the pulpit there are as the e are in other high places some slippery customers who require looking ciation of Steamer Property ...... 25,000.00 Leaving a balance of ...... 30,000.00 which they recommend be applied to the payment of a dividend at the rate of 6 per cent per annum.

The new steamer Saun Les was unfortunately lost near the Shautung Promontory on the 13th June last, and the El Dorudo having proved herself a very useful and economical boat the Directors have since purchased her sister ship (now called the Pechili) which may be expected here very shortly. The Taku has had a successful trial trip with the new engines and boilers with which she has recently been fitted; and a considerable increase in her cargo capacity, and a saving in fuel have been obtained. The present directors and auditors now retire, as provided for in the deed of settlemeat, but offer themselves for re-election.
